

Delaware Division of the Arts Seeks Nominations For Grant Review Panels

The Delaware Division of the Arts recruits Delaware citizens every year to review grant applications for state funding of the arts. The Division selects panelists based on their knowledge and experience in the arts, in related fields, and in the community. Special attention is given to ensuring that the panels reflect the demographics of the state with representation from all three counties.

Grant panelists are responsible for reading and reviewing applications three to four weeks prior to the panel meeting. They attend a full-day meeting where the merits of each application are discussed with fellow panel members. The Division provides training materials in advance to prepare panelists for this important process.

Do you know someone who might be interested in serving as a panelist? Please nominate them using this form. The Division will follow up with your nominee. While the number of nominations exceeds the number of available panel positions each year, the Division retains all submissions for consideration in future panels. Each nomination contributes to the diverse pool from which our panelists will be drawn.
